With a view of ascertaining the practicability of reaching the enemy's gun-vessels, which lay within the Straits of Genitchi, close to the town, Commander Day went alone on a dark but fine night, with the assistance of a pocket compass. After traversing four or five miles of low swampy ground, occasionally up to his knees in water, he at length advanced to within about 200 yards of the vessels. From the perfect silence on board he was under the impression that the expedition was a feasible one, but owing to increasing activity in the direction of the vessels on the following day, he determined to make a second visit to the spot. On this occasion the night was a squally one, and the journey longer and more difficult than before. Finding the crews of the vessels on the alert, he decided that any attempt to surprise them was out of the question.—Vide The Victoria Cross. From the Rev. Percy Barron collection.

Lieut.-Colonel A. BOULGER, V.C.

1. The Victoria Cross (From 12th July to 25th Sept. 1857).

3. Egypt 1882, one bar—Tel-el-Kebir.

* * * From the date of the departure of Havelock's Force from Allahabad for the relief of Lucknow, early in July 1857, until its entry on Sept. 25, Abraham Boulger was practically engaged daily with the enemy either in pitched battle with his regiment or as a scout and skirmisher. Twelve severe actions were fought, and in all of these he took part. In Lucknow he helped to storm a bridge and was the first man to dash into a masked battery.

His rank in 1857, and that which he lately held, is a sufficient indication of his meritorious services. After serving for many years as Sergeant-Major, he became Quarter-Master in 1872, and after taking part in the storming of Tel-el-Kebir retired as Lieut.-Colonel in November 1887. Died in Ireland, his native country, in January 1900.

 * * This Officer entered the Royal Naval College in February, 1835, and embarked in February, 1837, as a Volunteer, on board "Pelorus 16," Capt. Fras. Harding, in which vessel he was wrecked at Porte Essington, Australia, while holding the rating of Midshipman, 25th Nov., 1839. Joining next in 1841, the "Druid 44," Capt. Henry Smith, he took part in the hostile operations then in progress in China, where, in August of that year, he assisted at the capture of Amoy and Golongsoo (China medal), and was entrusted with the charge of a Signal Station at the latter place. On the "Druid" being paid off in the Spring of 1843, having passed his examination, 14th July, 1842, he was appointed Mate of the "Excellent," gunnery ship, at Portsmouth, Capt. Sir Thomas Hastings. After a servitude of three months, off Lisbon, in the "Albion 90," Capt. Nicholas Lockyer, he sailed, at the commencement of 1845, for the coast of Africa, in the "Actaeon 26," Capt. George Mansel. While at anchor off Achcen Head he saved the son of the Sultan of Sumatra from drowning, for which he was presented with a Malay Creyse studded with precious stones; when Lieutenant of the "Lily," on the West Coast of Africa, 1846, chased a slaver for two days, and was then blown, with two boats, off the shore, and when picked up was, together with his boat's crew, in a very exhausted state.*

THE DECORATIONS OF
GENERAL VISCOUNT HILL, G.C.B.

GENERAL VISCOUNT HILL. G.C.B.

During the Peninsula War, Hill was Wellington's most trusted General and was constantly employed by him in positions of independent command. Amongst some of his many important achievements, General Hill distinguished himself in command of the Second Division at Talavera. It was at this battle, when the French under Regnier were temporarily successful in an attack upon the key of the British position, that Hill brought up the Twenty-ninth Regiment, which, charging home, drove the enemy from the bluff that they had captured. On the bloodstained hill of Busaco, the General was in command of the right, and defeated Regnier's attack. He was invalided after the campaign of 1810, but resumed his command the next year, and defeated Gerard at Merida, in October.

Wellington's offensive campaign of 1812 was brilliantly commenced by Hill's surprise and defeat of the French at Almaraz. At this time he was commanding the army on the Tagus, and this victory was important, as it broke the French lines of communication between Seville and Madrid.

At Vittoria he directed the attack on the French left, and throughout the strenuous fighting against Soult's army in the Pyrenees, with Hope and Beresford, Hill took his full share of the successes of Wellington's army, afterwards winning the victories of Bayonne and Toulouse. At Waterloo, Lord Hill headed the Brigade (Adams) which swept the Old Guard from the field, and was second in command of the Army of Occupation in France, 1815-1818.

For his services Hill was made K.B. in 1812 and Baron Hill in 1814.

He succeeded Wellington as Commander-in-Chief in 1828, and when he resigned in 1842, was created Viscount. He died on December 10th, 1842.
